

{Refund Request}Does Robinhood do refunds? Step-by-Step Instructions

This is a [US] 1—866—240—0437 [US] critical topic, and it's essential to understand the distinction between a refund and a trade reversal on Robinhood. The platform generally does not issue "refunds" in the traditional sense,[US] 1—866—240—0437 [US] as all executed trades and transfers are considered final. However, they do provide a process for resolving specific issues, such as billing errors or unauthorized activity.

Key Rule: [US] 1—866—240—0437 [US] Robinhood does not refund losses from market fluctuations or a trading mistake you made yourself. When you place a trade, that transaction is considered final.

Where Refunds are Possible:[US] 1—866—240—0437 [US]

Robinhood may issue a refund or adjustment in these specific scenarios:¹

- Unauthorized Transactions: [US] 1—866—240—0437 [US] If someone gains access to your account and places trades or makes withdrawals without your permission.²
- Billing Errors: [US] 1—866—240—0437 [US] This includes issues like an incorrect subscription fee for Robinhood Gold or other service-related charges.
- Failed or Duplicate Transfers: [US] 1—866—240—0437 [US] If a bank deposit or withdrawal fails, or if you are charged twice for a single transaction.
- Technical Errors:[US] 1—866—240—0437 [US] In rare cases where a verified bug or platform error causes an issue, Robinhood may review the situation and issue a credit or adjustment.
